1. The navigation school at Wustrow is used for the training of merchant-marine personnel, and corresponds to navigation schools in West Germany. There is no definite information available to indicate that ship engineering personnel receive training at this school.
2. There is no clear evidence that the Wustrow school is affiliated with the "Deutsche Volkspolizei See". The training schedule includes no strictly military subjects, and no military specialists are employed as instructors. The political indoctrination corresponds to that given at other schools in East Germany.

- 25X1A 1. Comment: The school at Wustrow was one of the official German navigation schools up to the end of the war.
